

Runway to Room: Fall in Line With Camouflage

Put this fashionable pattern through its paces on walls, bedding, furniture and lighting fixtures

Nicole White Quinn

Houzz Contributor, Miami based interior decorator and event planner, and... More >

Email

Comment 11

Bookmark 20

Like 6

Embed

Print

Click "Embed" to display an article on your own website or blog.

Since fashion and home decor have long been kindred spirits, it's no surprise to see the fashion du jour, camouflage, popping up in home design. Spring 2013 fashion collections by designers like Perry Ellis, Michael Kors and Valentino showcased camouflage wear in many forms. Now this timeless print has made home decor its new frontier.

Be warned, this trend isn't for the faint of heart. Camouflage home decor is bold and in-your-face, so decide early on if you're willing to live with that much edginess in your home or office. If you like this pattern but in small doses, there are some subtle ways to incorporate it, too.

You can go bold with this trend by layering it on all your walls. It works well here because the wallpaper has gray tones, so it doesn't overwhelm the space. Cheerful dashes of yellow and green show up in artwork, a chair and a blanket. This room is designed for one stylish kid.

Tip: If having wallpaper installed is too pricey, then consider stenciling a camouflage pattern onto the walls and filling in your design with paint. It's a look you can achieve at a fraction of wallpaper's cost.

How to Use an All-Over Wall Stencil

This room goes for the gusto by bringing in many elements of the army lifestyle: camo print, metal via the ladder and even a multipurpose storage bench on casters.